ABOUT PRITISH NANDY

Prithish Nandy writes, paints, makes movies and occasionally, when he wins an election, sits in Parliament. He has been writing for The Times of India for over 26 years. In "Extraordinary Issue", he talks to all those who find his views controversial, challenging, charming or even utterly despicable. Just one small caveat. Nandy is always on the move, travelling for a film, writing a book, working on an exhibition of his paintings. Or simply eating lotus. So there could be occasional gaps, the odd delay. But Nandy is Nandy. He never ignores a barb, never lets a compliment go by without swatting it hard.

The views expressed in Extraordinary Issue are the author's own.

I love Indian women. They are beautiful, charming, sexy and (usually) infinitely cleverer than the men I meet. They are also less pompous and self important. In fact, they deliberately stay under the radar just to play the men around them.

This is why I love working with and sharing my life with women. I don't have to suffer locker room jokes or hear tall tales about fantastic sexual exploits. I can relax with women, have fun and (O yeah) crack jokes about men. I don't see the six yard sari as a sign of sexual bondage. I see it as a great liberating force. For me, it's far sexier than jeans, mini skirts and the horrible designer gowns that have suddenly become fashionable. The sari for me, is the ultimate turn on. Remember the rain soaked Madhubala walking into the garage in Chalti Ka Naam Gaadi? Or Kareena Kapoor dancing in the rain in Chameli? These are iconic images of sexuality. Both Madhubala and Kareena were sari clad, fully covered. Neither were doing the jhatka matkas you see even pre-pubescent little girls do on reality shows today. Yet they symbolised a rich and vibrant sexuality. As indeed did Meena Kumari in Saheb Biwi Ghulam and Waheeda Rehman in The Guide.

Now you know why I love Savita Bhabhi. She's Indian. She's sexy and she wears a sari.

By banning her site, the I&B Ministry has demonstrated (yet again) how men want to control women all the time. What is Savita Bhabhi's greatest appeal? That she is a typical Bharatiya nari who is brave enough to demonstrate that when it comes to sex she's no pushover. I have known many women like her who pretend to succumb to the sexual politics that men incessantly play around them and yet manage to get their way by cleverly manipulating the XXL male ego. So even as they play coy and subjugated, they are actually free women who live their lives on their own terms. I admire such women and worship on their altar.

No wonder Savita Bhabhi for me is iconic. She's the woman who can take all her sexual decisions on her own without fretting over them. Over 60 million fans flock to her site every month, no mean achievement for a sari clad desi nari, her long dark tresses parted dutifully in the middle where the bright red sindoor flames, while a mangalsutra dangles between her ample breasts. The idiots who argue that her's is a porn site should go visit what real porn sites look like. To begin with, every porn site uses photographs. Filthy, vulgar, exploitative photographs of actual women, not comic book characters having some harmless fun spoofing the way we Indian men treat our women.

Savita Bhabhi is a symbol of freedom, of empowerment, of the sexuality our women can wield if they are allowed to escape the sham world we Indian men trap them in because of our own fears of sexual inadequacy masquerading as machismo. That's why so many rapes happen. We feel inadequate when it comes to having sex with an equal partner. So we want sex slaves as wives, maids, friends, work colleagues, even underage kids.

Savita Bhabhi challenges this mindset. The more virgin and demure she looks, the more powerful she is as a symbol of defiance against male chauvinism.

Animation underlines that symbolism. It affirms unequivocally that she's not out to titillate; she's out to prove a point. The amazing artists who brought her alive (Deshmukh, Dexstar and Mad) have created a person who will survive in our history books as the first Indian comic book character who took on the pigs and made them wince. So much so that the Government of India had to invoke the IT act of 2000, amended in 2008, which allows it the power to ban any website that "threatens the sovereignty or integrity of India, defence and security of the State or hampers friendly relations with other states.

No, till date, I have not seen Savita Bhabhi seduce Sarkozy or Berlusconi though I am sure she would have done a pretty decent job of it. Nor have I seen her sleep with the Al Qaida. Even if she did, I would believe she did it in our national interest, rather than to sell any military secrets. Sari clad Indian women don't usually do that even when they have sex on their minds.

C'mon Ms Minister, stand up for women's rights and sexual freedom. Get your goons off Savita Bhabhi; set her free. Remember what Woody Allen said. Assassination is just an extreme form of censorship and I'm sure you don't want to kill off India's first symbol of the sexually liberated woman. There are a hundred surreptitious ways of still meeting Savita Bhabhi on the net but why should we? The Taliban hasn't taken over India yet.

Dear All I think the blog is not written with any other intension than gaining popularity - good or bad. And Mr. Pratish has been quite successful. The site is depiction of hidden desires of human being which one can not get fullfilled in real life. More so for the males. I am sure most of the indian women dont take liberation in the form of Savita Bhabhi. Bad thing about the site is - it will give wrong notion that any housewife may have this kind of desires - and some fools may give a try getting beaten to their surprise. Site is nothing but mere fantasy of a common man - Mr. Nandi and me both included. :) Which is certainly not what we really want to see in real day to day life. Once again Mr. Nandi congratulations for high no of reads on your blog - you got it as you wanted.

Agreeing wholesomely to Mr Nandy. Savita bhabhi represents the eternal fear of the MANKind! An independent & sexually assertive female. Down the centuries men in India are known for glorifying the female in the form of the "ideal" (defined by men) mother/daughter/sister/wife, thereby making them sacrifice for their own benefit. It's just like the "men" in the round building deciding on their own pay-packets. Please look around you guys "with open eyes" (and mind as well) and you'll find plenty of ladies personifying Savita Bhabhi in the real world. I think it's high time now that the government should put their time, energy and mind for betterment of the underprevidged, controlling economy & security of the country (all the areas where they have been failing quite constantly for the past 60 yrs) rather than trying to controll the flow it's citizen's seminal juices. We are moving towards an individualistic & regressive society, high in terms of intolerance and low in terms of patience, civic sense and social responsibility. A kissing scene in a bolly movie today incites people much more than the time when Ashok Kr kissed Devika Rani. When was that? 30, maybe 40 years ago! In "Kurbani" the % cleavage shown by Jenat was much more than any female lead of today...and remember Helen aunty. Further, carvings on ancient monuments and literature depicts that we (indians) were more tolerant towards others' preferences. How many of you have read Kalidas? His classic literature would make a lot of current erotic writers appear like novices! One advice to all...be a little more tolerant to others' perspectives...if you don't like obscene things...Don't look at them!

Long live Savita Bhabhi! The comic strip is just a reflection of the realities of Indian life wherein sexualities are sometimes trapped. As for pornography, I, an Indian woman sometimes enjoy watching porn. I see nothing wrong in it and believe that it is high time Indian society accepted sexual desire as a part of life.

Why digress from the topic. We should be discussing the morality of the moral police. The I&B ministry should keep to doing what it ought to. If its porn you are after, just go and ban all the hindi porn magazines that are sold on the railway stations throughout north india. ban the porn industry churning out c grade movies by the tons. Why target savitabhabhi.com which created a niche audience.

300 comments on SB posts against average of 70-80 comments for other posts by Nandi. Isn't it obviously states that I&B ministry of our democratic government has not taken a democratic decision. By banning an adult's entertainment site, you're taking a common man/woman's right to choose. Ofcourse, unless our government is hiding national secrets in SB site.

Appalled by some of the comments. Shameful and very lurid/condescending way of describing Indian women. In fact, it is indeed preposterous to even to read in your article that only a saree, mangalsutra or sindoor makes an Indian women appealing? Indian women are known for their culture, inexplicable tolerance, restrains, scarifies, family values and so many things that are beyond oblivious sorts...may be not in some leagues but ask those middle class who are still holding cultural ropes tightly. Madhubala, Meena Kumari or Vaheeda Raheman were iconic only because they were able bring out what Indian woman is all about...and it was their plain austerity that made them looked "sensual"..be it draped in sarees soaked in rains. Any kind of vulgar thing can never be vindicated by masking oneself with something so revered in our culture as saree, mangalsutra or sindoor..fact is fact...vulgar is vulgar....such websites are sheer ploys to earn living and lure pig heads at the cost of our cultural heritage. Thanks to our govt for bring-down the site and thanks Mr. Nandy for bringing out what's brewing and lurking in the minds of our emancipated modern men. Good show.

How many of us can claim to have never visited a porn site? Or is it just about the colour? Can the Indian Government and more importantly we the general people ban(or stop peeping into) all the porn sites around. Nowadays, even when we visit a website for some other reason, a naked lady pops up asking for sexual favours or when we get into a chatroom, the most frequent question asked is "Do you wan't to view my cam"? (i am nd) But we never complain about these filthy stuffs exploiting our privacy. Though i don't agree with the writer when he talks about sexual empowerment of a women with the help of pornography. A women need not be portrayed as a seductress to rise above men, there are other ways through which this can be done. But why don't our so called moral guardians poke their nose when every second foreigner is being raped, when people get away by raping little kids. For those who are so concerned about their kids visiting porn sites, should try to put a ban on the thousands and millions of sites circulating around the internet. Mind you, Savitabhabi is not the only Indian porn site, i can show you a hundred of them and a thousand of their imported siblings. Give us some space, we all have a mind of our own to distinguish the good from the bad. Stop this double standard of criticizing the Tabilanis and then act like them. The self proclaimed moral police has no right to get into our personal lives. But this is India where, the title of a movie has more importance than the fact that we ourselves are exhibiting poverty. What Sania Mirza wears is of more importance than how she plays. Where we fight amongst ourselves in the name of caste, creed and religion and still go bragging about unity in diversity. Where we have time to talk about the human rights of a mass murderer or a rapist, who deserve to be cut into pieces. If the politicians really want to do any good, then they should stay away from our private affairs and leave us alone.

I think Pritish's comparison of Savitha bhabhi to a liberated Indian woman does not make sense. Do you think a liberated Indian woman likes to get raped or enjoy sex with her cousins or like to have sex with her friends husband. I think only a filthy man or woman would think of doing such a think. Although i agree that Indian male has XXL ego but we cannot promote woman like Savitha bhabhi and call them a symbol of sex. I think she is a symbol of lust not sex. Savitha bhabhi must not be compared to an Indian desi bahu. This is just a cartoon story of a sex hungry wild woman who would do anything to satisfy her appetite. I think she must be liberated but must not be celebrated or compared to an Indian sex symbol. It is what it is - a pornographic website and must be enjoyed and categorized like that..... by adults only. My 2 cents

Sir, i am quite sad to read this one. you are married, and have kids and by self-admission, you'd wish they loved you more than what they currently do. Please don't mind but i was quite put off after reading your views on savitabhahi.com. not that i hv been to the site myself, but some readers hv explained what it is abt. i am intuitively sensitive to writers' emotions but your emotion comes across as an expression of your own sexuality and ways you like to express the 'joys of life', as you perceive them to be. You don't vouch for a general sentiment here, only your own personal one. like what i am writing is my personal view, not a trend i claim to represent. so whether comic or real porn, you think these women enjoy objectifying their bodies and minds, for earning crumbs of bread and butter, though some also do it out of addictive habit or lack of other money-making skills? am sure neither savita bhabi nor any other real porn star will turn you on anymore, once you also simultaneoulsy read abt REAL lives of these women post their continuous years of self-abuse in return for money. their self-esteem is ruined for life. it's sad someone with your kind of education and exposure found this to be a blog topic worth salivating about. i won't respect your justifications if at all you gave any. you may be too old to change. anyway, God bless you and may you find deeper happiness in your life. May you find peace and stability despite your extraordinary talents. All the best.

well.. i have read the blog and the surge of comments. Firstly i wud say govt of India has the right to take action for national interest. But one will have to see that the action shud b in totality.. and not just a showpiece. If govt really wants to ban explicitism being displayed in media and on net.. then why not act like China.. ?? And what wud we achieve.. even then the proxy sites will be found to see such things called bad for culture. Why govt doesnt destroy the monuments depicting women in sexually appealing pose.. ?? See.. our culure has always been about liberty of thoughts and action. Though freedom is not all about enjoying but a moral responsibility too. But every now and then a group becomes moral police and starts dishing out their own definition of culture .. And harassing others. This only increases vandalism and nothing more. i dont completely agree with Mr. Nndy about savita bhabhi being symbol of modern Bharatiya Nari.. but whatever she was.. she was mere a cartoon character.. a fantasy.. and is our culture so weak.. that it wud be destroyed by such fictitious characters.. The answer is NO. And such comics are out in markets.. kingfisher calendars, debonair,etc. even our films.. all dish out sex. It's parents responsibility to keep away their child from them until they grow adult to make their choices ! And about adults.. Havents you listened our health ministry's comment.. Mr. Gulam nabi azad was himself quoted as saying.. "tv helps keep population in control".. Now what will you say.. and mr. azad is right to an extent.. hai na!! So y bias to one form of media then..? our harass developers of a particular site..?? govt has better things to take care of.. and far more to do than just banning a site in name of cultural emancipation!

came this idea in their mind and they converted this innovative idea into reality and see the effect today millions of people are hitting there site and made them rich. Indian women, no doubt ,are very sexy and beautiful and likes sex but they are not like this character who can do anything for sex be it having it with a salesman or kids or boss or cousine. So don't compare savita bhabhi with an indian women just because she wears sari or caaries a name savita. cheers RV

I only partly agree with Pritish in his assertion that Savita reflects the strength and liberty of the Indian women. It is only true for urban(e) Indian women here also only partly. Lot of women have been able in showing their strength of character without involving sexuality in it. We should rather appreciate the strength and courage of such women rather than glorifying the sexual adventures of Savta Bhabhi. In fact we are demeaning those women. Although I & B Minister has not done pretty well in banning just this site. Her act would have been commendable if she could have banned all other porn sites and all such materials in print and electronic media without caring for the clamour made by people like Pritish and Mahes Bhatt. They are in fact employing good skills in turning tables upon us as per their convenience as Mahesh has done in Raaz and Raaz II as against Murder. These people can do anything for their sake. One more thing. If some people are not brought to nets (like our politicians), it should not mean that we should shun all our laws, regulations and rules. After all, these rules are certainly responsible in giving us a safe society. The saying by some people that Indian culture it great is too great to be abused by such thins, simply forget the fact that oceans are formed by little drops of water. So it is always advisable to nip such things in the bud.
